Chapter 1 by Story Wars

There was a reason that James Grozdanovski wasn't at school.

And I assure you I wasn't that reason...

I was pretty sure that he'd been murdered.

And I assure you that I wasn't the murderer...

Because I wasn't sure, I didn't tell a soul of my thoughts.

And I assure you I didn't start gossip...

I went along with my day as usual.

And I assure you there was nothing unusual about my day

I walked home like I do every day.

And I assure you I had no idea what was about to happen.

I then walked to James' house, where I found him lying on his bed.

And I assure you I didn't know if I should be scared or relieved.

I walked inside and wen't up to his room.

And I assure you I didn't need to break in...

I opened his bedroom door and saw his dead body on the ground.

And I assure you I called the police...

I sat and waited for the police to come.

And I assure you that I didn't touch the body...

When the police arrived they took the body.

And I assure you I didn't touch it at all...

The police then questioned me.

And I assure you I answered truthfully...

The police told me I couldn't tell anyone what had happened.

And I assure you I told no one...

They said this was all a big mistake and anyone that I told of the happening would have to be exterminated.

And I assure you no one found out what had happened...

No one...

But...

You...

I only walked in the door and I heard a crack and I checked Simon round the side of his head.

"Ow! What did you do that for?"

"For starters, I always know when you're lying! You start talking in a breathless way when you're not being totally honest. Secondly, if some shady people say they'll exterminate anyone you tell about this - why did you have to tell me!?" She folded her arms. "Now let's start this again from the beginning, did you walk straight home?"

Simon shook his head. "Not exactly, I took a detour through the woods... I go there to... smoke. If my parents knew, they'd kill me!" He sighed. "I wasn't far from James Grozdanovski's house. I heard some kind of a thump and James shouted for help. So I raced over there."

"And you didn't break in?"

"Well, I kind of broke in. The door was locked, but the kitchen window was open. So I didn't break anything... and I was shouting, 'James, are you okay?' when I got there."

"What happened next?"

"There didn't seem to be anyone about. So I ran up the stairs to his room. His door was open... and that's when I saw him."

I assure you the police thought I was the person behind the murder.

And assure you they didn't tell me this.

And assure you they asked why I went to James' house.

And assure you I'm gonna get reported for this.
